New 'Call of Duty' blasts last year's sales record

By Barbara Ortutay
 AP Technology Writer

NEW YORK — "Call of Duty: Black Ops" shattered entertainment records this week when it raked in $360 million in its first 24 hours on sale, once again proving that video games have cemented their place in our lives as mainstream entertainment on par with movies and music.

For the hordes of devoted fans who waited at midnight Monday to get their hands on the military shooter, this is hardly a surprise. For them, popping the new "Call of Duty" into a game console is the equivalent of turning on the TV to watch the Super Bowl or the World Series — except here, they control the outcome.

The game, from Activision Blizzard Inc., sold 5.6 million units the day it went on sale, according to the company. Its predecessor, "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2," meanwhile, sold 4.7 million copies to reap in $310 million during its first day on sale last year.

"Black Ops" went on sale Monday in North America and the U.K. It costs $60 and works on the Xbox 360 and PlayStation 3 gaming consoles. As such, games have an easier time setting dollar sales records than, say, movies or music, because fewer people need to buy them in order to bring in big bucks.

A court authorized this notice. This is not a solicitation from a lawyer.

If you worked at The Pittsburg & Midway Coal Co.'s mines located on and near the Navajo Nation, in Indian Country, in the county of McKinley, State of New Mexico, and were terminated from such employment in or about August, 1996, you could get payment from a class action settlement. Call the Law Offices of David R. Jordan at (505) 863-2205

The Navajo District Court, Window Rock District has allowed the lawsuit captioned Everett L. Chee, et al., individually and on behalf of others similarly situated v. Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Company, Civil Action No. WR-CV-483-99 to be a class action on behalf of "All persons who worked at Pittsburg & Midway Coal Company's mines located on and near the Navajo Nation, in Indian Country, in the county of McKinley, State of New Mexico, and were terminated from such employment in or about August, 1996."

A settlement has been proposed in that class action lawsuit against The Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Co. ("P&M"). The settlement will provide $3 million to pay claims to Members of the Class and attorneys' fees and costs. If you qualify, you may receive payment from the settlement, or you can exclude yourself from the settlement, or object to it.

The Navajo District Court authorized this notice. Before any money is paid, P&M may exercise its rights to void the settlement. If that does not happen, the Court will have a hearing to decide whether to approve the settlement. Settlement may not ultimately proceed.

WHO'S INCLUDED?

You are a Class Member and could get benefits if you worked at P&M's mines located on and near the Navajo Nation, in Indian Country, in the county of McKinley, State of New Mexico, and were terminated from such employment in or about August, 1996.

WHAT'S THIS ABOUT?

In September, 1999 Former employees of P&M sued P&M alleging (1) fraud; (2) misrepresentation; (3) discrimination; (4) breach of contract; and (5) violations of Navajo Common Law. P&M has denied and continues to deny these allegations. The Court did not decide which side was right. But both sides agreed to the settlement to resolve the case and get benefits to the Class Members, if it is ultimately approved by the Court.

WHAT DOES THE SETTLEMENT PROVIDE?

Subject to certain conditions and if the Court ultimately approves the settlement, P&M has agreed to pay $3 million into a common fund in which to settle all claims that have been or could have been made by

Plaintiffs and Class Members. Attorneys' fees and costs also will be paid out of that common fund of $3 million

The settlement will provide $3,000,000 (less attorneys' fees and costs) to pay class members a proportionate amount of damages based on a number of factors including whether you were terminated and re-hired or not, whether you took an early retirement, whether you received a severance package upon termination, and several other factors.

HOW DO I ASK FOR MONEY?

A detailed notice package contains everything you need. Just call Class Counsel, David R. Jordan, at 505-863-2205.

WHAT ARE YOUR OTHER OPTIONS?

If you don't want to be legally bound by the settlement, you must exclude yourself by December 8, 2010, or you won't be able to sue, or continue to sue, P&M about the legal claims in this case. If you exclude yourself, you can't get money from this settlement. If you stay in the settlement, you may object to it by December 8, 2010. The detailed notice explains how to exclude yourself or object.

If the P&M does not exercise certain rights it has in the settlement, the Court will hold a hearing in this case (Chee et al. v. Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Co., Case No. WR-CV-483-99) on December 22, 2010 at 9:00 a.m., to consider whether to approve the settlement. You may ask to appear at the hearing, but you don't have to. For more information, call Class Counsel, David R. Jordan, at 505-863-2205.

Vegas spectacle, cross-genre duos at Latin Grammys

By Raquel Maria Dillon
 Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mexican pop-rock group Camila and Dominican singer-songwriter Juan Luis Guerra tied with three awards each at the Latin Grammys, a jubilant event that drew reggaeton artists in jeans, mariachis in traditional suits and actresses in slinky gowns.

The gala attracted top Latin stars from three continents. It also featured some odd pairings: Guerra rapping while synchronized swimmers kicked their legs upside down in pool.

Enrique Iglesias performing with reggaeton duo Wisin y Yandel. Canadian-Portuguese folk-rockers Nelly Furtado and pioneering female hip-hop MC Mala Rodriguez getting their groove on with the b-boy crew Jabbawockeez.

But the audience embraced the pan-Latin diversity, enjoying every moment and relishing the artists' exuberant expressions of Latin and national pride.

Camila won recording of the year and song of the year for "Mientes" and for best group vocal album for "Dejarte de amar."

Band leader Mario Domm thanked his mother for "putting up with so much noise" while the band recorded the album.

Guerra, whose career stretches over more than two decades, won album of the year and best contemporary tropical album for "A son de guerra," and best tropical song "Bachata en Fukuoka," adding to his previous 12 Latin Grammys.

He told the audience that the album might sound romantic but it's also a call for morality. "The time has arrived for us to reclaim justice and integrity for the Latin American people," he said.

The hosts, Mexican comedian Eugenio Derbez and actress Lucero, worked their way through a list of 47 categories in diverse genres with devout followings, from sertaneja in Brazil to Tejano in the American Southwest, with some awards presented during the pre-show.

Spanish singer Alejandro Sanz won best male pop vocal album for "Paraiso Express," bringing his career total to 17 Grammys.

"When I saw the opening of this Latin Grammys show, I got very emotional. I was at the first one," he said. "And see how far we've come."

Venezuelan reggaeton duo Chino y Nacho burst out of their seats when they win for best urban album was announced.

Reporters asked them what he planned to do with his gold gramophone. "Put some shots in there and drink it," Nacho said.

Bronx-born Prince Royce sang his chart-topping bilingual version of "Stand By Me" with Ben E. King, the song's original composer and singer.

King's granddaughter first played him the song. The difference between the original and the bachata version? "You can dance faster," he told reporters later.

Ricky Martin sang "Lo mejor de mi vida eres tu," with Natalia Jimenez of the Spanish pop band La Quinta Estacion. He also presented the Person of the Year award to Spanish opera singer Placido Domingo.

"Sadly many artists who I shared the stage with are no longer with us," the 69-year-old tenor said. "That's why it gives me such happiness to keep on singing and living days like this."

Marc Anthony sang "Y como es el" along with Jose Luis Perales, who popularized the song in the 80s.

His wife, Jennifer Lopez, who sat in the front row, seemed moved by his second song. "Tu amor me hace bien" which brought the audience to their feet to dance.

Rapper Mala Rodriguez's defiant but danceable hip-hop song, "No pidas perdón," won in the best urban song category, beating out her male Puerto Rican colleagues, including Daddy Yankee and Don Omar.

"Now they will always, always, always say, 'the winner of a Latin Grammy, Mala Rodriguez.' Sounds good," she said.

Best alternative song went to the Colombian hip-hop group Choc Quib Town for "De donde vengo yo," an earworm of a song about the remote Pacific coastal region of El Choco and its distinctive Afro-Colombian culture.

"Long live the African people of Latin America!" said Gloria Martinez, as she choked back tears of joy, resplendent in a royal blue head wrap and a shimmering yellow gown.

Martinez said she chose the dress to wear the colors of Colombia and "to feel like myself."

"They're broadcasting this in the plazas in El Choco. We're so proud. This is national news, for the Pacific to win a Grammy," she said.

Mexican Ely Guerra brought home best alternative album for "Hombre invisible," her first independent recording.

"We who make alternative music used to watch this from far away, so to win feels really good," she said.

Even though Gustavo Cerati, lead singer of '80s sensation Soda Stereo, has been in a coma since he suffered a stroke after a concert in Venezuela in May, he was honored for his recent solo work. Cerati won best rock song for "Deja Vu" and best rock album for "Fuerza Natural."
